Empowering Generations | Strengthening Communities

A message from our Chair

At the Australian Institute for Intergenerational Practice (AIIP), we believe that the power of human connection transcends generations. Through our work, we are building a society where young and old are valued equally, meaningful relationships flourish, and evidence-based programs drive real social change.

Our journey so far has been extraordinary, but we cannot do it alone. We invite you to partner with us—as a sponsor, supporter, or champion of intergenerational connection. We are driven by our vision; we seek to empower communities, organisations, and individuals to adopt intergenerational practice as a way of life.

We lead national and global conversations on intergenerational practice through:

- Advocacy and policy engagement
- Evidence-based training and professional development
- Research and program evaluation
- National and international networking
- Events like our flagship annual conference.

Your involvement will help us deliver impactful programs, advance research, and create opportunities for people of all ages to connect meaningfully.

By sponsoring AIIP, you're not just funding an initiative—you're shaping a movement. You are helping build more connected, compassionate, and sustainable communities across Australia and beyond.

We look forward to working with you and welcoming you into our network of changemakers.

Warm regards,

Professor Anneke Fitzgerald

Chair, Australian Institute for Intergenerational Practice

AIIP 5TH ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Delegate Profile

Delegates connected with the AIIP are a growing network of individuals who are passionate about building stronger communities through intergenerational connections. They are practitioners, educators, and researchers working directly in or alongside intergenerational programs. Many are delivering services in aged care, early childhood education, schools, community development, youth work, and local government—while others are exploring how to introduce intergenerational approaches into their own practice.

While AIIP members form a strong foundation of this community, the Annual AIIP Conference casts a wider net. Each year, it attracts a diverse and highly engaged group of professionals who may or may not be AIIP members but share an interest in building age-inclusive communities through connection and collaboration.

This includes:

- Academics and researchers at the forefront of intergenerational and community studies
- Practitioners from aged care, early childhood, schools, youth services, and mental health
- Local government and policy professionals shaping age-friendly strategies
- Community organisations running intergenerational programs nationwide
- Philanthropic leaders and impact investors looking to support scalable, evidence-based initiatives
- Students and emerging professionals beginning their careers in the field.
- Individuals who foster interpersonal, socio-emotional and communications skills in high school students and university graduates to better prepare them for work in a multigenerational workforce.

By supporting the AIIP Conference, sponsors gain visibility with a passionate, purpose-led community and position themselves at the heart of Australia's leading intergenerational practice network.
